(#1180) $65.00

"Arthur Adamson: A Celebration" is a retrospective of renowned Manitoba artist Arthur Adamson's stunning visual art. The book features artist's images as photographed by Ernest Mayer, resident photographer at the Winnipeg Art Gallery; a comprehensive look at Adamson's visual artistic position by Pat Bovey, Past Director of the Winnipeg Art Gallery; an introduction by George Amabile, past Writer-in-Residence at the Winnipeg Public Library; and, Adamson's artist statement.

"In her essay on Adamson's art, Bovey looks at the variety of media in which he works—painting, printmaking, drawing, and watercolour. She addresses the major themes that dominate and recur through all this work, including Jacob and the Angel, Lazarus, the landscape, and the Expulsion from the Garden. She examines how the artist explores these themes in each of the media, their relationships and evolution through his use of colour, line, and texture. Further, she explores the source for his inspiration and the links between his visual interest in these themes and his work as an English scholar and art critic."

95]; July [100-111]. 4to., measuring 28 cm tall. Illustrated stapled card covers. Replete with black and white maps, photographs, portraits, illustrations, and advertisements for religious literature. Serving as the propaganda arm of the Inland China Mission which was founded by British evangelist and Christian Protestant missionary James Hudson Taylor (1832-1905). Established with the express aim of proselytizing to the Chinese, its object and purposes are clearly stated on all issues: "The China Inland Mission was formed under a deep sense of China's pressing need, and with an earnest desire, contained by the love of Christ and the hope of His coming, to obey His command to preach the gospel to every creature." It also produced a sister publication, 'Young China', an illustrated monthly directed towards young Christians. Standing out from other missionary societies Taylor was known for an uncommonly humanitarian approach with a sensitivity for Chinese culture; insisting on adopting the local dress, and customs of those to whom they were proselytizing to including, controversially, the women missionaries. The issues report on all matters ecclesiastical, reports from the "front", income and expenditure reports, results in the field (ie. the number of converts), inventory of equipment etc. Altogether, these issues provide a fascinating portrait of the state of affairs in China from a religious, political, and humanitarian perspective during the tumultuous early years of the Republic of China (1912-1949). All issues list the names of relevant clerical council members with nearly a dozen of Canadian extraction including clergy from Toronto, Vancouver, and London (ON). Lightest age-toning to the margins, otherwise very good+ to near fine. Stapled Wraps. (#1196) $295.00

Our offering includes the following issues: Vol. XXXVII, No. 4 (April, 1929); Vol. XXXVII, No. 5 (May, 1929); Vol. XXXVIII, No. 6 (June, 1929); Vol. XXXVIII, No. 7 (July, 1929).

24. White, Douglas.

An Open Letter to Young Men. Toronto: Reprinted by Canadian Social Hygiene Council, N.D. [Circa 1944]. First Canadian Edition. pp. [1], 28. 12mo., measuring 4.5" x 5.5". Illustrated card covers featuring a black-and-white photograph of a man, woman, and small child holding a banner of the Canadian Social Hygiene Council above their heads, to the front cover. Lightest age-toning, vertical stamp of the "Winnipeg Health League" over text of cover title. Contents bright, clean, and unmarked with tight, sound binding; very good+. Rear cover reads: "This pamphlet published by permission of The British Social Hygiene Council." The social hygiene movement was a progressive effort advocating for the control of the spread of venereal diseases, prostitution, and other forms of vice through the use of empirical means, and utilizing modern media techniques to disseminate their message. Social hygienist organizations emphasized sexual continence, and strict self-discipline as a solution to societal ills, tracing prostitution, drug use, and illegitimacy to rapid urbanization. The Canadian Social Hygiene Council emerged alongside its British, and American counterparts using similar means, and methodology beginning from the late 19th century and well into the 20th. 30. [The Sound Money Economic Association [Party of Manitoba]

Membership Ledger/Roster of "The Sound Money Economic Association" (Manitoba Political Party) To Restore Consumption and Employment (Non-Political, Non-Sectarian). Winnipeg, Manitoba: The Sound Money Economic Association [Party of Manitoba], N.D. [Circa 1939]. First Edition, First Printing. 4to. Leather-bound ledger measuring 13.5" x 8". The ledger comprises of twelve filled-in, and ruled pages (out of 297 pages in total) divided into three columns with the names, addresses, and telephone numbers of "registered party members for the year 1939". All names appear in ink and we can deduce by the multiplicity of penmanship's that each was written

individually. In all, the association appears to have comprised of over three hundred members for the year 1939. Each member was required to affirm that they had "examined the plan and drawings of the Sound Money Economic System and by my signature fully endorse the aims and object of this constructive plan to restore full capacity consumption and thereby full-time employment. I wish to become a member of the organization and hereby make my subscription of $1.00 for every year membership. For the membership fee I am also to receive a copy of the plan., membership card will be a receipt." The Sound Money Economic System Association also appears to have been a registered political entity and indeed fielded three candidates in the Manitoba General Election of 1941 held on April 22. These were: T.H. Elliott, Madeline Hrynlewlecki, and Thomas McConochie; none secured a seat in the legislature. Light scuffing to the leather spine, rubbing, and edgewear to boards. Leather Bound.

One of the many fringe political parties to emerge in the years immediately following the Great Depression, the Sound Money Economic Association advocated for a Keynesian-inspired intervention in the economic system to ensure complete employment, declaring their readiness to work with "any government and the people to end unemployment permanently". To date we are unable to locate any substantive literature on this little-known party emerging at the outset of the Second World War with no indication of material at the Archives of Manitoba, University of Manitoba Archives & Special Collections, the University of Alberta Peel Project, or Library and Archives Canada. Exceedingly scarce.

A commemorative book published on the occasion of the retirement of Archbishop Valerian Trifa - the monastic name of Viorel D. Trifa - of the Romanian Orthodox Church in America and Canada. Valerian was a noted supporter of the Romanian fascist and anti-Semitic political group, the Iron Guard (also known as the Legionnaire Movement). He played a part in the Legionnaires' rebellion of January 21-23 of 1941 which resulted in the deaths of 125 Jews and over 30 soldiers. His anti-Semitic views would later become the subject of a 1975 United States Department of Justice inquiry resulting in his relinquishing his American citizenship.

"Historians hail the Canadian Cook Book as a landmark. Lorne Bruce, head of archival and special collections at the University of Guelph, which houses Canada's foremost archival cookbook collection, says: "It was Canada's first mass-produced cookbook, emphasized nutrition, [reflected] the pre-World War I development of household science economics courses, which combined arranging menus, home administration, budgeting, finance, and efficiency with cooking and serving, and ... the postwar liberation of women through related workplace positions. Using 'Canadian' was inspired, tying it to Canada's growing independence from England."

"The Woman's Christian Temperance Union (WCTU) was the largest non-denominational women's organization in 19th century Canada. Believing that alcohol abuse was the cause of unemployment, disease, sex work, poverty, violence against women and children, and immorality, the WCTU campaigned for the legal prohibition of all alcoholic beverages. Its membership was drawn from Canada's growing middle class, and its members held evangelical Protestant views. The WCTU also advocated for women's suffrage in Canada as a way to effect legislative change towards prohibition. The WCTU promoted the work ethic of sobriety, thrift, duty and family sanctity, and undertook community work such as reading rooms, homes for women and children, and prison reform." 86. Adames, W.J. (Ed.); [Brotherhood Railway Carmen of America (United States and Canada)].

40 Issues of the Railway Carmen's Journal; Official Publication of the Brotherhood Railway Carmen of America. Kansas City, MO: Brotherhood Railway Carmen of America [United States and Canada], 1929-1950. First Edition, First Printing. 4to., uniformly measuring 5.5" x 8.25". Illustrated stapled card covers. A very scarce labour journal, which appears to have commenced publication in 1900 for the benefit of their working-class members until the dissolution of the organization in 1986. All issues replete with a variety of photographs, illustrations, and many advertisements. The contents of the magazines were not limited merely to discussion of American labour affairs but deliberate in great detail on the political, and labour affairs of their Canadian counterparts to the North; with a particular emphasis on the Prairie provinces (notably, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba), and Ontario. Subject matters ranged from inter-fraternal announcements, profiles, political deliberations, and even to religious discussions, etc. Our substantial, though incomplete offering provides unique insight into the state of labour relations both in the United States and Canada during crucial periods including on the eve of the Great Depression through to the Second World War, and its aftermath. The issues are excellent source material detailing the disruption, and upheaval experienced by working men and women both in the United States, and Canada from their distinct point of view. With the exception of two issues which have some chipping, tears, some loss (strictly confined to the front covers), all the other issues are remarkably preserved, and in excellent condition. Most (if not all) issues bear a small subscription sticker affixed to the front covers with the name and address of the subscriber; contents remain overwhelmingly bright, clean, and unmarked with tight, sound bindings. Overall, very good+. Not found in Peel, BAC/LAC, the University of Manitoba Archives & Special Collections, or Dalhousie University, Labour Studies Collection. Rare to be offered as a set, and in this condition. Stapled Wraps. (#1452) $1,495.00

Originally conceived of by two brothers, William H. Ronemus and Frank L. Ronemus, The Brotherhood of Railway Car Repairers of North America (as it was originally known) was established in Cedar Rapids, Iowa on the evening of October 27, 1888 with a total of seven members. Following a joint convention held in Topeka, Kansas on September 9, 1890, they merged with the Carmen's Mutual Aid Association, a similar organization based out of Minneapolis, Minnesota, and which was established by Sylvester Keliher. Following this amalgamation, the 'Brotherhood Railway Carmen of America', came into being. The Brotherhood's stated objectives were: "to advance the moral, material, and industrial well-being of its members" and "to secure for our members a just remuneration in exchange for their labor... to shorten the hours of labor as economic development and progress will warrant, eight hours per day is the workday desired, and 44 hours per week, in order that our members may have more opportunities for intellectual development, social enjoyment, and industrial education." (Estelle May Steward, Handbook of American Trade-Unions: 1936 edition. Washington, DC: US Government Printing Office, 1936). The organization also established a Ladies' Auxiliary to Brotherhood Railway Carmen of America maintaining its own executive, board, and "grand lodge".

We have issued these recipes for two years, and we hope you have found them both pleasing and practical. Although we are discontinuing the printed service for the present, we would like you to know that if you are desirous of obtaining any specific type of recipe, or general diatetic information, please phone 37-101 and ask for our dietitian, Miss Moore." We believe this publication to be printed in 1941 based chiefly on reference to the verso of Recipe No. 24, which explicitly references "Hallowe'en, 1941", and Recipe No. 26 which references a recipe for, "War-Time Cake". The verso of each recipe card features an exhaustive index of recipes, a suggested "balanced menu", suggestions for picking, and other cooking hints and tips. Lightest age-toning to the cover, contents bright, clean, and unmarked; near fine. Near Fine. Card Covers.

"The Cyclops Review is a collection of new poetry and prose which features an eclectic mix of literary writers. From emerging writers, publishing their work for the first time, to established award-winning poets, fiction writers and playwrights, this collection captures the spirit of the small press publishing experience. Whether the authorial voice is emerging or established, what is consistent is the astounding literary diversity and quality of this collection."

Primer and Language Lessons in English and Cree. Toronto, Ontario, Canada: William Briggs at the Methodist Book and Publishing House | C.W. Coates (Montreal, Quebec) | S.F. Huestis (Halifax, N.S.), 1890. First Edition, First Printing. pp. 109. 12mo., measuring 19 cm tall. Original dark green cloth over boards with black lettering, and lovely floral motifs to the front board, and margins. Text printed in a combination of English and Cree Syllabics. Exceedingly scarce, with only one known extant copy available in commerce at time of cataloguing. Unusually well preserved, showing only a few scattered spots to the extremities. Internally, there is one very neat "withdrawn" library stamp to the fore otherwise there are no other library markings inside or outside. The contents remain bright, clean, and unmarked with tight, sound binding; near fine. An important remnant of the harmful "Indian Day Schools" which featured prominently in the early efforts by both the Canadian government and religious organizations to assimilate Indigenous children into Euro-Canadian culture. Indeed, in the preface, Rev. Glass notes, "Should a teacher, with the sanction of the Indian Department, instruct children in the use of Syllabics, fifteen minutes each day will be found sufficient; but the main effort should be to drill pupils in the English tongue". The Primer came into fruition not merely to teach "the Indians their own language", as Glass states but he goes on to stress the importance of its utility to missionaries and others in their efforts to proselytize the Christian gospels. 107. Burritt, (Colonel) Royal (1876-1962).

The Guards' Digest [of the Headingly Provincial Gaol]. Headingly, Manitoba: The Provincial Gaol, E.J.D., 1943-1945. First Edition, First Printing. Tall 4to., measuring 9" x 14". Textured green cloth over boards with gilt lettering to the front board. A bound volume of an exceedingly scarce penological periodical/digest published by the Headingly Provincial Gaol from February, 1943 to June, 1945, and comprising of 29 issues. Published under the governorship of reformist Col. Royal Burritt (1876-1962) each issue numbers 2 - 3 pages, and comprises of various scholarly, and practical articles for the betterment of correctional employees. It is exceedingly enlightened for its time with articles discussing all manner of penological affairs sometimes offering unusually detailed discussions; for example, offering insight with respect to the mental health of inmates. Unusually, for its time the issues openly discuss homosexuality, lesbianism, and other sexual preferences of the prison population. Indeed, in the preface to the first issue (Vol. 1, No. 1) of February, 1943, Burritt qualifies the need for such a publication by stating: "It is proposed to publish each month excerpts from Lectures given and articles written by authorities on Modern Penology. By this means it is hoped to refresh the minds of the officers serving in the penal institutions of Manitoba, in the fundamental principles of the philosophy of Modern Penology and also in respect to their duty and attitude in living up to those principles. In other words, this Digest will be of much educational value and should be carefully read and studied by all officers". A fascinating historical record, often incredibly far-sighted in its insights we are unable to locate any issues of this periodical amongst any institutional holdings. Not recorded in OCLC, LAC/BAC, University of Manitoba Archives & Special Collections. Rare indeed. Hardcover.

A real estate broker, soldier, and civil servant Col. Royal Burritt was twice awarded the Distinguished Service Order, as well as the Croix de Guerre. Following his appointment as Governor of the Headingly Jail (Gaol) in 1938 he rapidly instituted a range of reforms. Under his tenure, conditions for inmates improved dramatically with prisoners permitted to talk, smoke, and play cards during their daily rest periods; sunbathe while working outside and afforded a cup of cocoa before bed, and after lunch prisoners could also smoke in their bunks. Inmates were also now permitted to plead their grievances directly to the Governor with a 10:00 a.m. time set for inmates to bring forth their complaints every day. Effective March, 1939 movies were shown to inmates on Thursday afternoons as the recreation activity during the fall and winter months. Burritt's tenure also saw the cessation of compulsory attendance for religious ceremonies in 1944. He died at Winnipeg on 13 October 1962.

Exceedingly scarce first edition, and first printing of this venerable Canadian cookery book retaining all the its original coupons. Driver in her magnum opus, Culinary Landmarks (p. 212, Citation No. Q203.1) states: "First published in 1932, A Guide to Good Cooking followed the earlier success of Q79.1, Five Roses Cook Book, first published in 1913. A Guide to Good Cooking may have been a new collection of recipes, but in the words of Ferguson/Fraser, p.93, 'it was known forever as the Five Roses Cookbook'." The introduction states: "Twenty years ago [i.e. 1912], Lake of the Woods Milling Company, Limited decided that the most useful cookbook for Canadian housewives should be written by the housewives themselves. Recipes were collected from all over Canada, tested and compiled in the Five Roses Cook Book. The Five Roses Cook Book is now a household name. Over a million copies are now in use - one for almost every second home in Canada. Great changes have taken place during the past two decades, and with this in mind, we decided to publish a more complete and up-to-date cook book. Another appeal was therefore made to Canadian women - and thousands of recipes and suggestions were received. We now offer this work - "A
